

The main reason that I got an XM radio was because I travel across the country in a RV. I feel safer spending my time driving than trying to find the station that is playing oldies or talk or Nascar as I drive my Motorcoach. Local traffic conditions and weather are extremely helpful to me and I again prefer tuning to one station and getting exactly what I need to know without having the distraction of trying to tune to local stations. Mainly because I am in a strange area and have no idea where to start searching on the FM dial. You try dealing with teenage drivers getting out of school and other road ragers while driveing a motorcoach and then add dialing a FM tuner. Please help keep this safe means of communications available to people like me who find themselves all over this great country. Ever try to tune a radio crossing Wyoming??? You get my point.

Ever try to find the local traffic station in Philadelphia (assuming you aren't from there)
